Introduction

Artist Rand Holmes began writing and drawing Harold Hedd adventures for the Vancouver, British Columbia newspaper Georgia Straight in 1969.

The weekly feature quickly became popular, rivaling Gilbert Shelton's "Fabulous Furry Freak Brothers" in humorously portraying the lives and foibles of members of a counterculture (that is, "hippies"). Besides Harold, the cast of characters included Cousin Elmo, a former biker and free spirit; Harold's cat, who like Fat Freddy's Cat, holds his owner in amused contempt; and Leroy, the gung-ho incompetent who represents the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. All these characters appear in "Hitler's Cocaine."

Holmes' artistry, storytelling talents and his Harold creation were quickly recognized, and two Harold Hedd adventures appeared in comic book form during the early 1970s. The first was a compilation of the strips drawn for the Georgia Straight, the second centered on a marijuana deal in Mexico. The latter has been reprinted many times and attained the status of an underground classic. "Hitler's Cocaine" is the first full-color Harold Hedd adventure, and the book you hold is the first of a two-part mini-series. The second book of the series will be on sale next month. This is the first Harold Hedd adventure published in nearly ten years.

Rand Holmes was raised in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, and he says he got his artistic training from painting signs for ten years: "That's how I learned brushwork and lettering." He lists his major artistic influences as being Wallace Wood and Will Eisner.

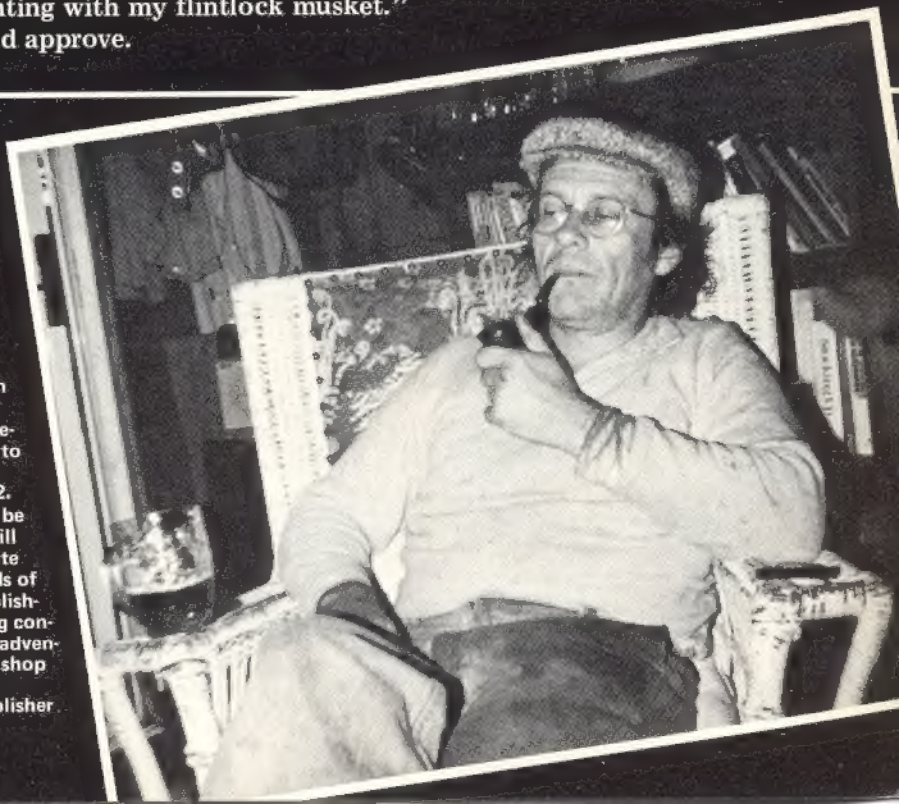

Rand's work has appeared in, among many others, Slow Death, Tales from the White Lunch, Fog City Comics, Dope Comix, Gay Comix and the current Pacific Comics titles Alien Worlds and Twisted Tales. His wraparound cover and frontispiece for A History of Underground Comics, published by Rolling Stone's Straight Arrow Books in 1974, demonstrated his versatility with various comics styles. Although the characters depicted are faithful to the originals, Holmes' style still shows through.

Holmes currently is living on a remote island—he prefers we not mention where—"under circumstances that make Stalag 17 look like a health resort." He has built a homestead on the island and is learning to cope with Canadian winters in the wild. Between drawing and working on his house, Holmes has little time for frivolity. But...

"When I'm not at the drawing board or working on the homestead, I like to sneak off for small game hunting with my flintlock musket."

Harold Hedd would approve.

New Hardcover in COLOR!

Will Eisner's LIFE ON ANOTHER PLANET—originally serialized in his SPIRIT MAGAZINE—has been retouched, colored by Eisner and Andre LeBlanc, and collected into a handsome 136-page graphic novel. Hardcover edition only. Sewn binding. Available at all comics shops!

"A HARROWING PORTRAIT OF RUTHLESSNESS AND CORRUPTION. There is a disquieting directness about Eisner's work here. What's striking about the visual storytelling is the extraordinary economy of visual means Eisner uses to advance the tale from one image to the next." —Dale Luciano, in The Comics Journal

HAROLD.. READ THE PART WHERE HE TALKS ABOUT THE GERMAN CARGO!

After we had picked them up and were once more under way I questioned the German pilot in my cabin ...

At first he was reluctant to talk but when I questioned him as to the nature of his mission he became extremely agitated and "rattled on" at great length...

..The gist of it being: that he felt his plane and crew had been "thrown away" on a "fuwolous errand" at a time when they were desperately needed for the defense of the Reich.

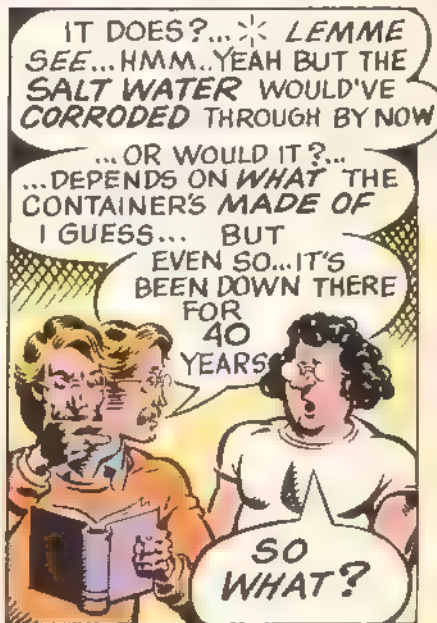

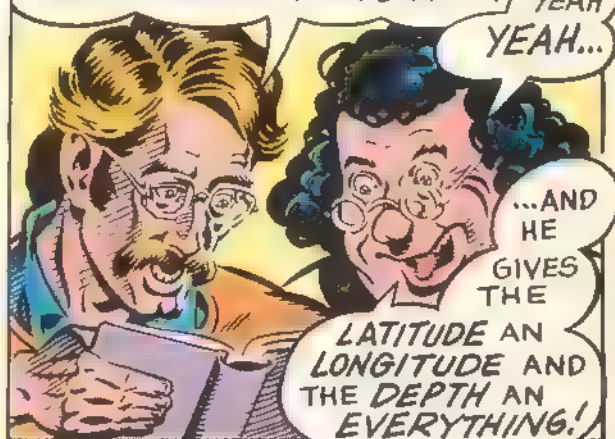

I couldn't help but agree when he told me the contents of the cargo he had been sent to pick-up.

HAROLD HEDD

Yes folks, in the early 1970s —over a decade ago— Rand Holmes introduced HAROLD HEDD to a national audience with with the oversize black & white HAROLD HEDD No. 1. The adventures of Vancouver's favorite unsavory hippie was originally printed in The Georgia Straight. These collected adventures contain fables, political commentary, comic strip parodies and laughs, laughs, laughs. Follow Harold and Elmo as they outwit the establishment! Glory in nostalgia as they fight cruel landlords and avoid pot busts! Only $2.50 + 50 cents postage.

In 1973, a second Harold Hedd adventure was written and drawn by Rand Holmes. Follow Harold and Elmo as they try to ship a planeload of marijuana from Mexico to Canada. This truly classic comic book features Mexican bandits, beautiful women, a World War II British Lancaster plane, 3,000 pounds of pot and the U.S. Air Force. Did we mention laughs? All for just $1.50 + 50 cents postage. Both of these for just $4.50 postpaid!
